MILTON DRIGGS FUNERAL SUNDAY

Funeral services for Milton Driggs, son of Prof. and Mrs. Frank M. Driggs, was held yesterday at 4 p. m. in the chapel of the Utah State School for the Deaf and Blind, with Rev. Frank G. Brainerd officiating. Special music was furnished by Mrs. Fred N. Hess and Mrs. Howard Driggs. The speakers were Apostle David O. McKay and Rev. Brainerd. Prof. Maud May Babcock read a poem, written in memory of the dead boy by his uncle, Prof. Howard Driggs. Students and faculty members of the school and other friends of the boy and his bereaved relatives filled the chapel to its capacity and covered the bier with floral tributes. Interment was in the Mountain View cemetery, the grave being dedicated by Apostle McKay.

The poem read by Miss Babcock follows:

To Our Milton,
Sweet, sunny-hearted, noble boy,
Our lives are torn today,
Our souls are plunged in deepest grief,
To see thee pass away.

Thy radiant star of life is set,
His soul so bright and pure,
Our spirits lone and longing,
For thy happy words of cheer.

Dear Lord, we need his happy smile,
'Tis hard to bear the pain,
Why must we drink this bitter cup?
Why see him ne'er again?

Ne'er see him? Blot those cruel words!
His soul so bright and pure,
Has risen to a holier sphere,
In God, his life is sure.

He lives in treasured memory,
In all our aching hearts;
He lives, immortalized in love,
He never can depart.

His radiant, hopeful, sunny smile,
Could not be dimmed by death,
No pain could check his cheery words,
'E'en to his latest breath.

Dear Milton, God has called thee home,
Yet still thou lingerest near,
A starry soul, to lead us on
To God, whom thou art near.

In blossoms pure we lay thee now—
Our boy, so bright, so best;
Sweet dreams be thine; the morn will come,
Just sleep, dear heart, and rest.

With tender love,
UNCLE HOWARD.

GERMANS START FOUR GAS WAVES

Attempt to Advance on North Russian Front, But Meet With Repulse.

PETROGRAD, March 26, via London, March 26, 2:15 p. m.—(British admiralty, per Wireless Press)—After the discharge of four gas waves the Germans yesterday attempted to make an advance near Postov, on the northern part of the Russian front below Dvinsk. The war office announces that the Germans were repulsed.

"In the region of Postov the Germans, having discharged four gas waves, attempted an advance," the statement says, "which was repulsed."

"In the region of Odochawski, east of Baranovichi, about two companies of Germans in white overalls attacked but were dispersed."

"Northwest of Smorgon our artillery hit a German airplane which fell into the enemy's lines."

Theatres

AT THE ORPHEUM
"Hell Morgan's Girl," a vivid cinema reproduction of the Barbary coast of the old San Francisco, in which the great earthquake and fire that almost destroyed the city in 1906 is resurrected on the screen, was shown at the Orpheum theatre last night to large patronage. It will be featured again Tuesday and Wednesday at the same playhouse. In the picture, Dorothy Phillips, a beautiful girl and an emotional actress of ability, is starred with a strong supporting cast that includes Albert Allen, William Stowell and Lon Chaney.

Miss Phillips essays the role of Lola Morgan, a girl born and reared among the dives of the Barbary coast, old San Francisco's slum district, but raised her head as queen among its denizens, unmarked by the scarlet letter. She is the pride of her father, "Hell" Morgan, who, though willing for her to find a mate among his cronies, though giving her free license in this matter. And the girl, who possesses real depth of character, is weary of the overtures of the habitués of the Hell Morgan's place, having an indefinable feeling that she is far above them where anything deeper than friendly association is concerned. Chief of her suitors is Sletter Noble, chief of a gang of gunmen and crooks.

Amid other scenes, Roger Curwell, an artist son of a big business man, loses the support of his father, taking $20,000 as his last gift. Evil companions soon lead the high-strung young fellow to part with this and in the parting he becomes a drunkard. Chance takes him to Hell Morgan's place and there he is saved from probable death by Lola. Through her influence he is reformed and after many tribulations, which include the passing through the dark hours of the earthquake and fire, the death of Chaney and Hell Morgan, supreme happiness comes to them.

The drama, scenically and in action, is intensely interesting, several realistic gang fights and pistol duels on the Barbary coast being staged with the "bark" off.

At the Utah.
Charley Chaplin, king of movie comedians, and at his best, and Clara Kimball Young in "The Savage Instinct," were the attractions last night at the Utah theatre, to be continued tonight and tomorrow.

The inimitable Charley plays the role of floorwalker, etc., in this picture and is a laugh-tyrant from start to finish. The chronic grouch surrenders to the god of joy and laughter and the blue devils of pessimism flee far away when this king of jesters and pantomime comes mincingly into view, twirling his ever-useful cane, adjusting his "Beau Brummell" coat and trousers (large enough for a Goliath), and making his feet express the joy of the occasion.

In Blue Ridge Region.
Who yearns to see life in the heart of the Blue Ridge mountains of Tennessee and North Carolina is given a rare opportunity in "The Savage Instinct." This photoplay was filmed there, in really truly style. The scenery is magnificent. Even the blue haze of the famous mountains is depicted with perfect fidelity to nature. The cabins, the mountaineers, are real. On one rustic porch, at a home in the wilderness, one sees the ancient loom, on which the good housewife and her buxom daughters manufacture the jeans and linsey-woolsey for the family's clothing, and the old spinning wheel is seen in operation, while the girl doubtless sings as she whirls the wheel. "Come, Bill and Tom and Jack and Pap! Ye must meet John Morgan at Cumberland Gap!"—a song that meant tragedy on a large scale in the '60s.

Real Bear as Comedian.
There's a bear in this play and he's a consummate actor—the wisest, cunningest, most delightful bear, an animal comedian, playing his part to perfection and "dying" heroically in defense of his mistress. Bears and other savage animals are domesticated as pets in these mountains. The girls like bears and the boys dote on diamond-backed rattlesnakes and the bigger they be the better they like them. This bear delights both children and grown-ups. The heroine and her sweetheart milk the cow. While they build air-castles, their milking finished, the big bear slips up, inserts his muzzle

MANAGER GOSS WILL GUARANTEE 'THE BLUE PARADISE' TONIGHT

Heralded as the best musical attraction or light opera sent west this year, "The Blue Paradise" comes to the Orpheum theatre tonight for the one night engagement, with its cast of seventy artists and two carloads of scenery. The Messrs. Shubert have advised Manager Goss of the Orpheum that he can personally guarantee the attraction as the best of the season and refund back the purchase price of the tickets if any of his patrons are dissatisfied with the production.

Not since the days of "The Merry Widow" has there been such a successful musical comedy produced in New York City as "The Blue Paradise," which is also of Viennese origin. It was so well liked in its original presentation at the Casino theatre that it was kept there for an entire season and not a theatrical season either, but a year of fifty-two weeks. Aside from possessing a good book, the English version of which is by Edgar Smith, "The Blue Paradise" is a most tuneful composition and possesses a plethora of tuneful numbers, especially the never-forgettable "Auf Wiederseh'n" number, which is being hummed and sung all over America.—Advertisement.

MOUNTAIN STATES CO. FOR INTER-STATE CAR

Notwithstanding the fact that an impression has been made that the only Utah distributor of the Interstate car is confined to Salt Lake, the Mountain States company of this city is the distributors of that car in Utah, Idaho and western Wyoming and the company is shipping a goodly number of the latest models. The company is located at 2366 Hudson avenue and carries a complete line of the cars, as shown in the display and sales rooms. H. C. James, Jr., who is the local manager, was in Salt Lake a few days ago and engaged an auto dealer there to take the agency for the Interstate car in that section.

"We are very enthusiastic about our new cars," says Mr. James. "With the extra value we have to offer the buying public this season we feel that it will not be a question of selling the cars, the big difficulty will be in getting enough machines to supply our territory. There is going to be the worst car famine this spring the auto industry has ever known and no matter which make of car buyers are figuring on they will do well to place their orders immediately or they will have to walk the biggest part of the summer."

In the pall and transfers the delicious milk to his "tummy." And the combined efforts of the lovers, when they discover him, fail to remove the bear's head from the bucket until the last sweet drop is down.

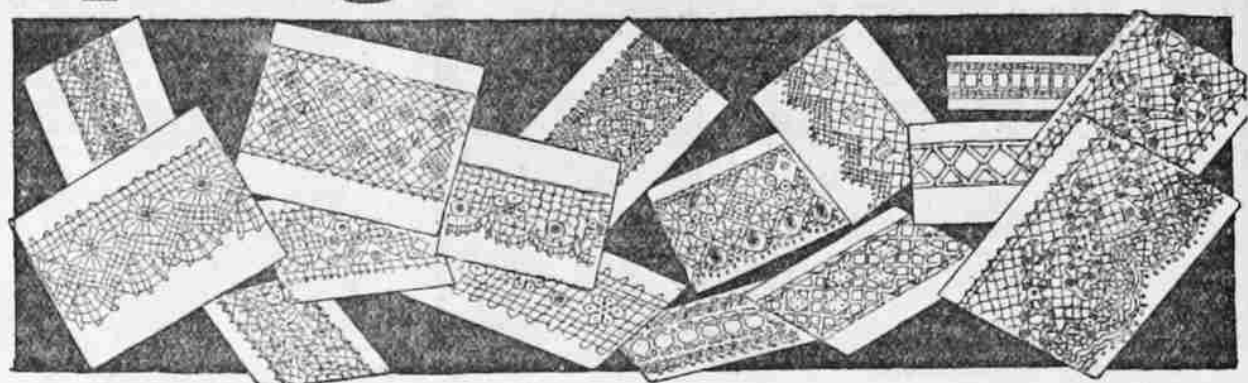

Heroine's Iron Heel.
Miss Young enacts her difficult role in mountain costume, of course, and barefooted. The audience wonders how she can race through the rocky glens, over needle-sharp crags, and through briar-entangled dells with bare feet. She had to do it, to make the part complete, for the mountain girl abominates shoes, except in real winter, and the soles of her feet are so leathery tough she can lay a hickory pole across a mine and crack it with her heel as easily as with a hammer.

The play shows moonshiners at work of course, with every part complete, and the revenue men in search and pursuit. The play says hopefully (but untruthfully, however) that the moonshine still and the primitive customs are now a memory of the past; that these interesting people have become conventional and civilized.

The house was packed at each show last night and the time passed swiftly.
